The relationship between the LGBT community and the religious community can be a very complicated one; however it is important to understand the interaction. It is also important to realise that within any community there are voices which may be more progressive or more conservative.

People within each religious community can hold independent view points, so community members may not all hold exactly the same opinion. Overall, religious communities strive to promote love, compassion, tolerance and community spirit. This means that people may still be loving, welcoming and friendly towards LGBT individuals, even if they consider that being LGBT is wrong.
